

Case study

Crash.net

Driving content to mobile

Objective

txtNation, enables Crash.net to deliver cutting edge content to their customer base, which is exactly what they wanted to achieve from an early stage in the development of the website.

Course of action

As with most websites in this niche, the project started with simple integration to activate their vast image and video library to mobile. The service still to this day is a featured offering and offers both casual readers and enthusiastic website customers unlimited download opportunities, whilst adding richness to the website experience.

Results

Crash.net realised the market for mobile images and video content is very much on the increase. They immediately took hold of the txtNation solution and could see it's massive potential after just several weeks.

“ They are highly professional and their rates are very competitive. I would have no hesitation in giving them the highest recommendation. ”
